THE FLYING MOLLISONS TO MAKE ONE MORE DARING FLIGHT

Amy Johnson Mollison, famous British aviatix, who has many daring flights to her credit, and her husband, James Mollison, one of the most intrepid aviators living and the only man to fly solo from England to New York in a non-stop flight, have decided to make one more daring flight, or rather two, before retiring to live on a farm. This time the flying husband and wife will go in harness, hop across the Atlantic from England to New York, and then take off from New York back across the Atlantic to endeavor to set a new non-stop long distance record. It is a most ambitious program, but both Captain Mollison and his wife have already established records which seemed impossible. If they are successful—and everyone hopes they will be—then off come their flying toys for good and a little farm somewhere in the Mother Country will adopt a new farmer and his wife. The meeting in the little somewhere in the Mother Country will witness a wonderful woman on her triumphant return to Croydon after establishing the double record for flights between England and Cape Town. Captain Mollison was photographed (above) after flying over the Atlantic Ocean in a biplane to land in New York.

CANADIAN ARCHBISHOP ELEVATED TO CARDINALATE BY POPE PIUS

An unusual picture, made in the Vatican shortly after Pope Pius XI had created six new Cardinals at the recent consistory, held in connection with the celebration of Holy Year. The new Primate of the Church are shown here after their elevation to the Cardinalate, with the Canadian Archbishop, Rodrique Villeneuve, of Quebec, third from the left. The group is as follows: Cardinals Theodor Innitzer, Dallas Koets, Rodrigue Villeneuve, Maurice Fossat, Fumasoni-Biondi and Dolei.

CLONIE TAIT HAD ENVIABLE RECORD AS LIGHTWEIGHT

Clonie Tait, who died in New York March 11, had an enviable record in the ring.

Clonie, or "Klondike," as his father called him, learned his boxing at Edmonton under the tutelage of Kid Scaler. After beating all the best in and around the capital city, Tait turned professional.

Joining the 19th Battalion, under the command of Jim Cornwall, at Sures camp he won top place in both lightweight and welterweight classes. Encouraged by his victories, Tait started in quest of the Canadian title and was matched with Johnny O'Leary, at that time Canadian lightweight champion, and won by a knockout in the tenth and final round.

O'Leary could not and was given no other chance. Tait won more decisively than in the former encounter, the bout ending in the fifth round.

Tait later clashed with Harry Anderson at Edmonton, winning by a K.O. in the third round. He also successfully defended his title against Frankie Bull and Henry Haskell. He never lost his title in a Canadian ring.

Clonie next toured the states, where he met Uncle Sam's best. He fought Ritchie, "Pinkie" Mitchell, "Rocky" Kansas, Jimmy Goodrich, and Lew Edwards, the latter champion of Australia. He lost to Ritchie at Milwaukee, got an even break with Mitchell at Minneapolis, and fought a no-decision battle with Rocky Kansas at Buffalo. He lost a very unpopular decision to Jim Goodrich at Toronto, and gave Lew Edwards a horrible lashing at Minneapolis, the scrap going only two rounds.

Of late Tait made his home in New York, where he had under his wing a string of promising young boxers, among them Pete Nobe, a junior welterweight, and "Polly" Walker, a welterweight.

Bonnie Tait, one of Clonie's brothers, fought Johnny Gerstman at Grande Prairie some time ago. George Tate of the courthouse, is an uncle.

FLEEING BEFORE A TORNADO DRIVEN OFF HER COURSE

Fleeing all night before a tornado, Amy Johnson, on her flight from London to Cape Town, was driven a hundred miles out over the South Atlantic before she could fight her way back onto her course. On the return trip a squallstorm forced her to fly through a deep valley in the Atlas mountains, and the wind, blowing at seventy-five miles an hour, made it necessary to face it and to fly crabwise. On this stretch she finally had to give up and turn back and wait two days for better weather.

Automatic Janitor at High Pt. N.C.

The post office at High Point, N.C., has installed an electric eye which automatically regulates the amount of light entering the building. If the sun floods the building with a glare of light, windows are automatically closed until the amount of light entering is just that which is desired. If a thunderstorm comes up the windows are shifted so as to allow more light to enter.

BARBED SHAFTS OF WIT LOST G. B. S. ADMIRERS

The rapier-like wit for which he is famous was the cause of losing George Bernard Shaw, celebrated author and dramatist, two of his most ardent admirers during his recent visit to Hollywood. En route to San Pedro, Shaw stopped off at the movie capital to see at first hand how the great industry is operated. During a tour of the sets he was introduced to a number of famous film stars, and it was these introductions that G. B. S. gave his well-known wit the work-out that lost him two notable rans. First, the visitor blurted out to Miss Brandy: "Why a girl with a nice face like yours wears a hat like that. That placed Miss Brandy among the anti-Shawians, for while a woman will forgive many things, criticism of her clothes—but in particular—is not one of them. Shaw loomed his next barb when lovely Ann Harding was introduced. Miss Harding remarked that she was soon to play in one of Shaw's plays—"Captain Brassbound's Conversion." Whereupon Shaw inquired where she had played the part previously. Miss Harding said, "a little town near Philadelphia," and was astonished when the dramatist announced: "I'm sure it must be a pitiful performance"—and as a pitiful performance is the production of a play without payment to, or permission of, the author, Miss Harding retired to her room in tears.

ON THE SEE-SAW OF DESTINY

The "ups and downs" of life were never better illustrated than by this picture. Chancellor Adolf Hitler, once a humble house-painter and now dictator of Germany, is shown chatting with former Crown Prince Wilhelm, who is now in line to rule the country before his father's abdication, and who is now an ordinary citizen. They are pictured at Potsdam just before the opening of the special session of the Reichstag at which Hitler demanded and was granted dictatorial power.
